HIS LOVE.

It was evening in the country. The moonbeams peeped softly between the leaves of the pulseless oaks and kissed the song-birds lost in happy dreams. The rose and the lily were asleep, so were the parasip and the string-bean, and all the amorous air was toned with languid scent to the sublime altitude of a swell drug store.

They were walking up the shady avenue from the village, whither he had taken her to prove his boundless admiration and love at a five-cent soda-water fountain.

"No," he commenced, for he knew they were getting near her vine-clad cottage, and he hadn't much time to lose, "my love for you shall never wane, wilt or grow less. With you I shall sail through life as tranquilly as over a placid moon-lit lake in a flat-bottomed boat, with a virtuous at the stern playing the 'Old Folks at Home' on an accordion. You are my evening star this evening and every other evening, and you shall have a seal-skin sacque every Christmas."

She clutched his ready-made coat—or rather its sleeve—in a wild ecstasy of ineffable delight, while he continued: "You are the sweet particular idol of my life, and I shall take you to the circus next week. My love for you is deep as the ocean's cunning and the plumpster's pocket, which, like a spring, refills itself when drained. Mine is a wild enthusiasm passion that will withstand the rigors of the Arctic butcher and milliner. The strawberry vendor may lose the cunning of the hand that arranges the menorah specimens below the large ones in the three-quarter-pint measure which he guarantees to hold a quart; but my love you will never lose, even if you beat it on a horse-race. Ah, yes, fair Imogen, while life lasts you shall have in me a defender against all the trials and tribulations of this vexed, uncertain life. My love for you burns like a dollar in a poet's pocket; it also burns like your snowy star, and not till that goes out—"

"It has just gone out," she broke in. "Alas, too true!" he sighed. "I have been swearing by a Fourth-of-July balloon."

And he didn't say another word until he good-nighed at the gate.—R. A. Munkittrick, in Harper's Magazine.

Mental Visions.

Dickens used to say that he sometimes heard the characters of his novels speak to him. A French novelist declared that, while writing the description of the poisoning of one of his characters, he had the taste of arsenic as distinctly in his mouth as if he himself had been poisoned. Artists sometimes have this power of making a mental representation seem real; but it is a dangerous power to use. The mental vision may haunt the man until he becomes insane.

Dr. Wigan tells of a skilful painter whom he knew who assured him that he had once painted 300 portraits in one year. The secret of his rapidity and success was that he required but one sitting and painted with wonderful facility.

"When a sitter came," he said, "I looked at him attentively for half an hour, sketching him from time to time on the canvas. I wanted no more. I put away my canvas and took another sitter."

"When I wished to resume my first portrait, I took the man and sat him in the chair, where I saw him as distinctly as if he had been before me in his own proper person—I may almost say more vividly."

"I looked from time to time at the imaginary figure, then worked with my pencil, then referred to the countenance, and so on, just as I should have done had the sitter been there. When I looked at the chair, I saw the man."

"Gradually I began to lose the distinction between the imaginary figure and the real person, and sometimes disputed with sitters that they had been with me the day before."

"At last I was sure of it, and then—and then—all in confusion, I suppose they took the alarm. I recollect nothing more. I lost my senses—was thirty years in an insane asylum. The whole period, except the last six months of my confinement, is a dead blank in my memory."

The New Prisoner of Chillon.

The Castle of Chillon has another mysterious prisoner. Bonivard's successor is a lady "40 years old, said to be a Russian," and her offense is that she tried to shoot a simple German from Magdeburg as he sat on the terrace in front of his hotel at Gilon. She seems to have done so under a misapprehension. She thought he was a Nihilist, and whether she tried to kill him because she believed him to be a traitor to the cause or, as other conjectures have it, because she wanted to punish him for his sentiments to the Czar can make no difference in the regard worshippers of force must have for her.—S. James Gazette.

EDUCATING CIRCUS CLOWNS.

The Process Detailed by a Professional Esthetic Factor.
(From the Chicago News.)

"I've heard it said that great actors are born not made. It isn't that way with clowns. They make clowns, and I never knew one that was born that way," said little Billy Andrews, the esthetic jester of Meyer & Shorb's United States circus. Billy had been in a reflective mood, and the burden of his thoughts was evidently the profession of which he is a distinguishing member.

"How do they make 'em, Billy?" the writer asked.

"That depends upon what kind of a clown he is. A 'Johnny Newcomer' of a clown, as we call some of the fresh fellers, just hops into the ring and gets everything down fine in a minute—in his mind. But a clown that is a clown serves an apprenticeship. Generally, when he is born, he is the master, as far as possible, of experiments and experiences, giving her nearly absolute knowledge in the matter."

Some years ago she was interested in the subject of intemperance. First, she read up the subject thoroughly from a scientific, ethical and social standpoint. Then she secured male attire and passed days and nights, not only in the fashionable resorts of vice and intemperance, but in and about the lowest dens and dives of New York and Philadelphia. Not satisfied with seeing all that could be seen of drunkenness and its results she concluded to go to work systematically and get drunk herself.

At this time she was boarding at the Continental, in the latter city. She got on two confidential friends in her room, arranged to have a physician with in, and then, ordering liquors, set about getting chock full in a most methodical fashion.

First, she drank freely of the lighter wines. These had no effect upon her, when she resorted to stronger liquors. She drank on until she had taken about

"No, that is just as it happens, as I've said. A boy is never taken as an apprentice clown. Every show has several boys in training for performers. Whenever it happens, that one of these boys displays any ability as a mimic, they put him down for a clown, and then a clown is made, whether he wants to be or not."

"There is a popular suspicion that the profession have some means of preserving through ages the good old stories and the bearded jokes of the clowns. The rose and the lily were asleep, so were the parasip and the string-bean, and all the amorous air was toned with languid scent to the sublime altitude of a swell drug store."

"They were walking up the shady avenue from the village, whither he had taken her to prove his boundless admiration and love at a five-cent soda-water fountain.

"Now, maybe you imagine that is a great gag, but it isn't. The jokes and stories of the clowns are not kept on ice, whatever smart newspaper people may think. A good many of the funny stories in the papers are old enough to wear whiskers, and many of them are coined in the ring. What the methods of other clowns are I don't know, but as for myself, whenever I see a good story, or observe a trait of human character that suggests a gag, I immediately make a place for it in my memory, and when I have to use it I give it all the originality I can. And after all I don't think it is fair to demand that a clown shall invent every good story that he tells."

"How do you clown rank on the salary list of the profession?"

"The clowns and riders receive the largest salaries. I have known clowns to be paid as much as $500 a week, and as little as $25 a week, for the season, which always lasts twenty-six weeks, if the Sheriff don't get the show in the meantime. Performers of any note have little reason to fear a loss of their salary in these times, however. The big shows all have too much property to let the bottom fall out, and about the only sufferers are the 'Jim Crow' performers who have to go with six-by-nine shows or leave the business. The average salary of the clowns who are worthy the name will run from $75 to $100 per week; yet few of them save any money. They are high-livers when in prosperity, but, as a class, they do not drink to excess. The money goes, though."

"And then what becomes of the clown when he grows old?"

"Well, a clown lives about as long as anybody, and, as a rule, he manages to get enough together to get a little farm to retire to when he is too old for the ring. Clowns have a great fondness for farms to die on. That's about what happens when a clown buys a farm. About as soon as you hear he has got it you hear of his death. I am not quite ready to buy a farm yet, myself."

The Bicycle.

The bicycle, in conception, dates back to the early part of the present century, being a lineal descendant of the cyclostele, or speed-mechanic, invented by Baron Von Drais, of Mannheim, on the Rhine, in 1816. The Baron was a landscape gardener, and invented the machine as an aid in traveling in the discharge of his duties. It was very little like the bicycle of the present day, being propelled by the feet operating not on the wheel, but on the ground. The first machine propelled by cranks on the wheel was invented in 1860 by Pierre Lallement, a French mechanic, and was first used in New Haven. The chief difference between the bicycle and velocipede is that in the former the weight is borne by a single large wheel, the diminutive one in the rear operating merely as a guide, while in the latter the wheels are more nearly of a size.

Discovery of the "Comstock."

Bon Holladay is a feature and fixture of Washington. He lives in a beautiful residence on K street, where he entertains a coterie of friends in right royal fashion. His fortune is estimated at from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000, so that it may be fairly presumed that if he should prove unsuccessful in the prosecution of his claim for $350,000 he will not be in immediate want for the necessities of life. He has retired from business, but amuses his leisure hours by seeing the Congressmen about his claim. Though advanced in age, he shows no signs of failing in strength or health. His hair is just turning gray, but his frame is as powerful and vigorous as it was in early youth, when he established and operated the famous overland-stage line, known as the pony express. He likes to tell of his experience as a pioneer of advancing civilization on the Pacific coast, among the Argonauts of '49.

His story of how the famous Comstock lode was discovered is interesting. As he tells it, one of his stage drivers had a prospector's passion for broken rocks, outcroppings, float and other indications of mineral treasures. On a certain day he came to Mr. Holladay full of a discovery he had made, and showed a sample having a wonderfully large proportion of silver in its composition. He made a frantic effort to sell one-half of his mine to Mr. Holladay for $1,000 for money with which to operate it. The offer was refused, and the driver resigned and disappeared. In a month or so a company was formed and operations were begun. The mine yielded the richest ore ever taken out of any mine up to that time. Comstock, for that was the stage-driver's name, became suddenly one of the wealthiest men in the country. The stock rose rapidly from hundreds to thousands of dollars, and finally $100,000 was paid for a claim twenty feet across the face of the lode. Next to the Bonanza it was probably the richest mine ever discovered in the earth. Mr. Comstock followed the rule, and from being one of the richest men soon became one of the poorest, and finally died penniless.

The Fitness of Things.

When a school teacher is expected to have a thorough education, an unruled temper, a weak and lowly disposition, and to wear good clothes, board at a respectable establishment, and maintain a galaxy of graces and enchanting qualities, all on $1 a day, we question the fitness of things. Man is of many troubles and changeabilities, but when potatoes are over 50 cents a peck it takes nerve to be a school teacher at $27 a month. School teachers do not grow, like weeds and circus performers; on the contrary, good pedagogues are scarce, and the school-room is the last place in the world on which public economy should try to experiment.

—The circus parade was the best ever seen here.

—Captain John Neal and wife, are home from the West Indies.

—Mr. J. W. Bates has returned from his trip with the Wisconsin editors.

—Misses Kittie and Little Williams are visiting Miss Belle Carpenter in Milwaukee.

—Detroit and Troy played the only league game of ball yesterday. Detroit won by a score of 6 to 0.

—The rain this morning brought a great many farmers to town who would not otherwise have come.

—The sale of brooms last night, was a delusion and a snare. Purchasers were simply clutching at straws.

—Miss Mary Sullivan will enter St. Mary's Institute in Milwaukee, on the opening of the term in September.

—Wall King has received the September Number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. It is an entertaining number as usual.

—Mrs. W. S. Chaslo leaves to-day for Portland, Oregon, on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. George H. Stuart, who is reported as very ill.

—The picnic of Trinity church, tomorrow, will be one of the most delightful affairs of the season, if the clerk of the weather only smiles upon it.

—Mr. Louis Sholes, agent and correspondent for the Chicago Inter-Ocean, was in the city to-day, en route for Geneva Lake. Years ago Mr. Sholes was a printer in the Gazette's office.

—Janesville has two very fine young lady elocutionists. The recitations by Miss Ida Davies and Miss Lilian De Long at the entertainment last night, were exceedingly well rendered.

—August Koplin, the young man charged by Minna Hein, with being the father of her unborn child, concluded to marry her. The ceremony was performed by Justice Patten yesterday afternoon.

—Mrs. Mary Bennett, of New York, is in the city, visiting her sister, Mrs. John Nelson. Mrs. Bennett was in Janesville two years ago, and during her stay, made many warm friends, who will be happy to again meet her.

—The broom brigade entertainments proved a financial success, a little over $200 being netted by the two performances. The proceeds are to be devoted to a worthy cause, and the result is very satisfactory.

—An entertainment will be given in Cannon's Hall Wednesday evening Aug. 23, by some of Mrs. S. R. Noyes' pupils assisted by well known musical talent, new selections, songs and music, to coincide with a dance. Harry Anderson will furnish the music. Admission 10 cents. Tickets to dance 50 cents, for aisle at King's Book store.

—The Germania Society excursion to Milwaukee next Sunday will get a good number of recruits here. The train will leave here about 8 o'clock in the morning, after the band plays two or three pieces. A grand time is expected, and the crowd who will go are just the kind who understand the means of procuring all the fun there is in a thing.

—The second exhibition of the Broom Brigade and their entertainment, at the Guard's armory last night, was fully as successful as the previous one.

The brigade of belles performed some fancy evolutions not set down in the manual, and were loudly cheered.

After the drill the brooms of the brigade were auctioned off by the Hon. Thony Norcross, each broom bringing $1 except one which went for $1.50 to Mr. Fred Sounborn. The entertainment concluded with a dance.

—The Farg Daily Argus in its report of the reception of the Editorial excursion there on August 10th, pays the following high, though well-merited compliment to the Lower City Band: "The Janesville Cornet Band is one of the finest musical organizations in the Northwestern States, ranking with the most noted bands in Milwaukee and Chicago. It consists of twenty-three pieces, its members are elegantly uniformed, and its performance yesterday was one of the specially attractive features of the day."
